

OpParis has faced a number of challenges since the launch of its operation. Organizations such as Anonymous have targeted non-ISIS accounts and any twitter account with Arabic writing by only assuming its association with ISIS.

Anonymous even claimed to have uncovered an ISIS plot to attack a WWE event in Atlanta, however, the FBI found no evidence of any threat.

OpParis published links to a Newblood package, which is available on Ghostbin.com.

- How You Can Help
- Noob Guide
- Twitter Report
- Search Terms

OpParis IRC chat is also available.

Media Coverage:

- Anonymous Goes to War with ISIS and Shoots Itself in the Foot
- Anonymous 'War on ISIS' is Falling Apart

OpParis Tweets

#OpParis
@OpParisOfficial

 Follow

We use Paris to get people's attention and then throw this out to them.

Hejmeddig @Hejmeddig1125

@opparisofficial i know its horrible what happend in paris but what about other countries that Suffers Like Palestine, Afghanistan?

RETWEETS
16

LIKES
72

Source

#OpParis
@opparisofficial

 Follow

@th3j35t3r so we read your article and... you're right. We aren't 100% certain on whether accounts are IS, but not saying they all aren't.

RETWEETS
3

LIKE
1

Source

This operation quickly deteriorated as Anonymous lacked the drive and skill to verify accounts before launching attacks. However, OpParis continues as members have moved to attacking "ISIS" websites with tools like SlowLoris and Tors Hammer.